Featured Artist of the Month Jim West

James (Jim) West is an Ocean Shores retiree who began a life-long love and pursuit of still photography as an art form at the age of 10. He is the Associated Arts of Ocean Shores Artist of the Month.

With his interest aided by a local 4-H club in his native Pomona, CA, Jim was doing black-and-white developing and printing in his own darkroom, and had won his first photography award, at the age of 14.

His love of photography was useful in his work. With a career as an aerospace engineer specializing in microelectronics, he did a lot of technical photography that involved using processes and procedures that would exactly achieve images that were precisely pre-conceived. However, that was the opposite of his artistic approach to finding and creating images that please him and others.

“I like to take shots that capture a mood,” he observed. “I was taught a more photojournalistic approach to shooting,” he said, explaining that the idea is simply that there are good images everywhere, if your photographic “eye” is open to finding them.

He lived in Kent, WA, for a few years in the 1980s, and has a sister in Maple Valley. When he retired in 2015, the “desert rat” who photographed SoCal motorcycle racing for 20 years, searched far and wide but knew he wanted to live at the water. His sister was familiar with Ocean Shores, and he went through the process that many locals here have experienced, of visiting, looking at homes and falling in love with the area. For Jim, the combination of Duck Lake and the Pacific Ocean sealed the deal. With retirement, he found the time to pursue his love of photography to greater heights. He shoots some digital, but finds many situations in which he prefers to go old-school and shoot real film. And although he often shoots color, he hasn't lost his love of the creative aspects of B/W photography. His concession to the 21st century is that he scans his negatives. But he strives to limit digital trickery at the print stage to the same effects as he achieved with the types of image enhancing that he learned years and years ago in the darkroom. Lately, he has been working with panoramic images shot with some of his medium-format film cameras.

Jim enjoys street photography and travel, and has found some of his favorite images in the happy confluence of these two interests. For example, a simple situation that caught his eye in Malaga, Spain, yielded what he calls "my signature shot" - a vintage brick wall behind a street musician with a sign in his open guitar case that reads, "Gracias."

Soon after he moved to Ocean Shores, he got involved in a local photography group and was subsequently invited to join the Gallery of Ocean Shores, where his art can be viewed.

An extensive collection of his photography, curated into several galleries, can be found on his website, www.jameswestphotoart.com.

Corrine Holden

David Done

Corrine and David have been creating in Ocean Shores for the past several years. She focuses on clothing made from old quilts and other “found” materials. He is a writer and colored pencil artist. Come check out what they have been making lately.

Corrine makes coats, jackets and vests out of primarily old cast-off quilts. She stumbled upon this art form when a friend offered her a couple of old worn out quilt tops. She entered several of them in this year’s Wearable Art Show. She says the warmth of these garments is perfect for our chilly beach days year round. The jackets can be dressy or casual. The full length coats could be housecoats or worn by a bride to and from her wedding. The “Cozy” is a pullover style that can be worn on the beach or around the house to save on your heating bill. Come try them on and see how it feels to wear a quilt.

David has been writing most of his life. He has 3 collections of poetry, one of which includes the work of his son as well as an uncle. His prose includes a book of short stories and two longer tales based loosely on some of his life experiences. He also has been drawing for a lot of his life. He took up colored pencil drawing under the tutelage of Penny Dalton at the Gallery of Ocean Shores. He continues to work in this art form expressing much emotion in his rendition of everyday local scenes as well as from his travels.

So, in the spirit of community and letting you all have a voice, we are giving you the opportunity to give us your best theme ideas! We will be collecting ideas until August 1st.

Once we compile the collection we will spin a little magic on our end and announce the theme for the 2024 Ocean Shores Wearable Art Show!
